to Hot Water. "Typographical errors," said a writer, "are continually cropping up. I called for a magazine editor the other day to take him out to luncheon. As he was getting gratefully into his coat a man entered.

"Do you read your magazine?' the "'I do,' replied the editor.

"'Have you read the new number, the one that came out yesterday?" 'I have.'

" Have you-read my poem, "To Gabrielle," on page 117? KU. No! Well, in that poem I wrote the line, "I love you better than I love my life." '

"'A neat line-neat and well turned,"

said the editor soothingly.

"'And one of the professional humor ists of your composing room set it up to read. "I love you better than I love my wife."
"'How-er'-

"Than my wife- precisely that. And my wife knows nothing of composing room comedy, and she thinks the line was printed exactly as I wrote it."

China has four state established re-ligions, and in each the emperor exersacerdotal functions. Twice a year the emperor as "son of heaven" worships before the tablet of Shang Ti or supreme heaven in accordance with ancient imperial monotheism Twice a year he burns incense before the tablets of his ancestors in accordance with Confucianism. Twice : ear he sacrifices to the gods of Taoism and twice a year to the image of Buddha. The ancient and primitive religion of China is monotheistic, but this direct worship was regarded as too sublime for the people, so that it became reserved for the emperor alone as the "son of heaven" and as priest of the nation. The people on their part worshiped their ancestors, and it was this ancestral religion which Confucius identified himself with and reformed. The old superstictons rejected by Confucius were absorbed by Tao-ism, which is polytheistic and the religion of the populace. Then Bud-dhism came into China about 65 A. D. and, like the other three religious, be came state supported and state en Squeezed the Squeezers. It is said that when Mr. Yerkes began to make money some of the banks from which he had borrowed thought to "squeeze" him by demanding in stant repayment or a large considera tion for further time. He was invited to call on one of these "bankers" and there met the others. Their demand was made, and their victim seemed at their mercy. They did not, however, know the resourcefulness of Mr.

Yerkes, who retaliated by remarking: "Well, I owe a lot to all the banks here, and I'll just publish a statement tomorrow in the papers, giving the full amounts and stating my inability to This will make such a run or the banks that they will soon be as broke as I should, and therefore I shall not be the only sufferer."

The "squeezers" recognized the truth of this and so withdrew their demand. Mr. Yerkes, however, refused to withdraw his threat unless they lent him another $50,000. They did so.

Making an Acquaintance.

In illustration of the ways of the east side of London the following true story is told: A certain club for work ing girls in the east end of London recently elected a new member. and one day the secretary happened to look out of the window and was surprised to see the new member rush up to a strange lad in the street, punch him violently on the head and then run away. The secretary remonstrated with her sharply, to which the new member made reply: "I'm very sorry. I won't do it no more if it's agin the rules, but perhaps you won't mind telling me, then, how am I ever to get

Why Sailors Like "Scraps." It has long been observed that the sailor, whether in commercial or government service, takes a peculiar de light in "mixing up" with the blue coat, but this inclination has been attributed more to a natural exuberance which comes with a land leave, ac celerated somewhat by artificial means, than to animus inherent with deep sea life. But why this feeling? Perhaps service, the long periods of close con finement to which the seaman is sub jected, make him a hater of any one who wears the emblem of authority when he is temporarily enjoying free straints aboard ship. The sallor wants liberty in its full sense, and, realizing that the bluccont is the chief obstacle to his obtaining it, he develops a firm conviction that the policeman ought to be trounced on general principles.

time it becomes his chief peaceful am bition .- Brooklyn Standard Union.

A certain couple in a New England village, each the parent of six children, had meted out to them a kind of poetic justice in which they falled to see the poetry.

The woman, a widow, pleading that she had no home and was therefore unable to care for her children, induced the local authorities to admit then to an orphan asylum. The man, r widower, pleading he had no house keeper and therefore no one to care for his children, induced the authorities to admit his six also. Thereupon, being freed from all incumbrances these two married.

All went well for a few months, when the authorities, learning of the situation, promptly dispatched the twelve children back to their parents, and, the woman no longer able to represent herself as homeless or the man as without a housekeeper, they were forced to receive them.

Death In Various Forms.

A crank came running into the office and said that a man swallowed a two foot rule and died by inches. The edi-tor started out at once to learn further particulars of the death and, meeting Dr. Martin, told him about the case. He said that was nothing; that he had a patient once who swallowed a thermometer and died by degrees. A couple of bystanders just then chipped in. One of them said it reminded him. One of them said it reminded him come up of a fellow in Kansas who swallowed a pistol and went off easy. The other one said he had a friend who took a quart of applejack and died in good spirits.-Exchange.

Ali Right, "That girl's all right," said the blond girl in the dressing room after she had looked everywhere for her overshoes. "The one who has just left, she's gone off with both the right overshoes and left me the left ones."-New York "imes.
